Electrophone.
1425 N. E. Ave.,
Washington, D. C.
Office of York Enterprise, Yorkville, N. Y., Aug. 14, 1891.
Atlantic Electrophone Gentlemen:—For the past five years my wife has been a sufferer from dyspepsia. So completely did the disease make a wreck of her former self that life was almost despaired of. Her nervous system was almost entirely destroyed, and the slightest noise would throw her into a nervous spasm, which would last for hours. Medical skill failed to bring any relief.
Through the recommendation of an eminent divine we were induced to try the Electrophone.
After a persistent use of the instrument, the effect has been wonderful. Her nervous system has been restored to its almost normal condition; her digestion is wonderfully improved; she is a really skilled in dress; and, upon the whole, is making a rapid recovery, which speaks volumes for the wonderful curative powers of the Electrophone, as her case was considered hopeless. If any are skeptical on the subject, let them try the Electro-phone, and its wonderful powers will quickly dispel all doubt. Yours truly, W. M. PERCY.

Gen. Boulanger's Fortune.

The recent suicide of General Boulanger recalls to my mind the incident that really laid the foundation of his military fortune and fame.

When Napoleon III. decided to send Maxi-millian to Mexico, in the vain hope of being able to establish an empire in that part of the American continent, he selected Marshal Bazaine to command the French contingent of troops. Among the officers ordered on this service was Boulanger. He was then a captain of Spahis, having but just returned from Algeria.

The Princess Carlotta was an enthusiastic and daring rider. While her husband was holding his absurd court in the city of the Montezumas, Carlotta used to mount her beautiful horse nearly every day and ride out of the main gate into the open country.

On such occasions she was seldom attended by more than one groom. The Princess was a woman of extraordinary beauty and extremely fascinating manners. Like Maxi-millian she was intoxicated by the pride and pleasure caused by her imperial, but evan-escent rank.

Whenever the Empress left the City of Mexico for a ride, it was her habit to go galloping over the arid plains for miles in a straight direction. Thus engaged, she made a picturesque figure in the semi-sterile landscape, and many a Mexican was forced to admire the woman, though his native patriotism led him to hate the imperial couple.

For weeks did Carlotta take these wild rides. She was never interrupted, and none of the court imagined that she was at any time in danger. One blazing hot afternoon Captain Boulanger was the officer commanding the guard at the principal gate of the city. He had just rolled a fresh cigarette, using the tender inner leaf of a corn ear for the wrapper. While lighting it he happened to look down the road, and saw a small coud of riders rapidly approaching.

Loitering against the small portal Boulanger watched the progress of the riders, supposing it to be a courier. Nearer and nearer came the dust, when to his astonishment the young captain saw that it was raised by a horsewoman. A second glance told him that the galloping rider was his Empress.

As Carlotta swept round a slight bend in the road, scarcely half a mile from the gate, Boulanger discovered a small body of horsemen in hot pursuit.

As it was evident that these Mexicans were endeavoring to capture Carlotta as a war prize, Boulanger saw the necessity of speedy action.
Throwing away his cigarette the captain unmanned his guard, and ordered the gate thrown wide open. Then he and his men rushed down the forming line as they advanced.

Carlotta galloped on, and soon reached the gate and safety. Boulanger and his guard opening a rapid volley on her pursuers. The latter, seeing that their prize had escaped them, rained in and then galloped off in safety.

For this action Boulanger was made a Mexican brigadier by Maximilian. On the return of the French troops to Paris, after Maximilian's execution at Queretaro, Emperor Napoleon gave the principal officers an audience. He noticed Boulanger among them, and greeted him very cordially, alluding to the Carlotta incident. From that day until the Second French Empire expired at Sedan, Boulanger was one of Louis Napoleon's favorites, and rose rapidly to the rank of general.

Maximilian met a shameful death, Carlotta is a lunatic, Napoleon died in exile, and now Boulanger is a suicide. Truly, the invasion of Mexico has been terribly avenged.—G. F. W., in the Rider and Driver

CRUCIFIED A CAT.—Three lads named Collies and Pfeiffer have been accused by the Very Rev. Frank A. O'Brien, of St. Augustine's Church, of Kalamazoo, Mich., of cruci-fying a cat. The boys will not confess, and their parents, who believe them innocent, have withdrawn them from the Catholic parochial school. The boys were playing "Oberammergau" and nailed the feet of a cat to a cross. The cat, interfering, was cut off and then nailed on. Mrs. Collins says she was ordered out of the decency because she denied his statement that her son had taken part in the crucifixion. Humane agent Merrill is investigating the affair.
